Response to Arguments

1. Applicant's arguments filed 8-18-03 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant contends the Yan reference lacks "spacings associated with the surface". Examiner disagrees because independent claims 17-18 recite "a non-uniform coating comprising coating islands on the surface" and Yan discloses in figure 12 multiple layers of coating islands "on the surface" of base (108).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

3. Claims 2-4,7,11,14,17,18, and 20-23 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Yan US PN 5,843,172.

Regarding claim 17, figure 12 shows a stent having coating islands spaced farther apart where a greater degree of local stretching or expansion occurs. During radial expansion, the innermost layer coating islands (bottom, 112) will experience greater stress concentrations than the outermost layer coating islands (top, 110). More specifically, if the bottom layer (112) faces the vessel lumen and the upper layer (110) faces the vessel wall, the spacing between the coating islands adjacent to base (108) have greater spacing than the spacing between the outer coating islands (114).

Art Unit: 3738

Regarding claim 18, figure 12 shows smaller coating islands (114) where greater degrees of local stretching occur (bottom, 112) as compared to coating islands adjacent to base (108).

Regarding claims 2-4, 11, and 20-23, a biocompatible and irregularly (or non-uniformly) formed patterned-configuration surface coating having locations where the coating is missing completely is shown in figure 12. Note that base (108) is coated with multiple layers of coating islands progressively decreasing in size above and below the base (108). Furthermore, note that a random pattern fulfills a patterned configuration.

Regarding claims 7 and 14, substantially round coating islands of equal size are shown in figure 12.
